

Intel today announced the release of a fully integrated Gen2 RFID reader chip, the R1000. The new chip, which is slated for volume production within weeks, may represent a major technological milestone for RFID as it precipitates a dramatic reduction in the cost and form factor of reader technology.

Complete Content Not Available in PDF Format See: <http://www.rfidjournal.com/article/view/6687>